Dual Citizenship Advisory for Korean-Americans
Candidates holding dual citizenship with Korea will NOT be permitted to undertake Fulbright Scholar grants to Korea. Individuals who are Korean-American may have dual U.S.-ROK citizenship unbeknownst to them or their family.

In April 2010, the Republic of Korea passed legislation that allows dual citizenship, with differing rules for men and women. If one of an applicant's parents has held or holds Korean citizenship, the applicant may automatically inherit Korean citizenship via Korea's "jus sanguinis" laws. In order to confirm their dual citizenship status, Korean-American applicants MUST contact the nearest Korean Embassy or Korean Consulate [1] prior to submitting a Fulbright application.

Korean-American applicants in the following circumstances are considered by the Republic of Korea to be Korean citizens:

- A Korean-American individual whose father or mother was still a Korean citizen at the time of the individual's birth.
- A Korean-American individual whose father was a Korean national and was deceased at the time of the individual's birth.

Applicants who fall under either of the categories listed above MUST contact the nearest Korean Embassy or Korean Consulate immediately to learn more about these regulations and the suggested procedures for citizenship renunciation.

For individuals who received American citizenship through adoption, their Korean citizenship should have been automatically renounced six months after American citizenship was granted. However, it has come to KAEC's attention that Korean citizenship renunciation has not always been finalized for adoptees. As such, those adopted from Korea also MUST contact the nearest Korean Embassy or Korean Consulate prior to submitting a Fulbright application to confirm their dual citizenship status.

It is the sole responsibility of the applicant to determine whether they have dual citizenship and how it impacts their eligibility for a Fulbright grant. If any individual is found to have dual citizenship at the time of or after grant acceptance, their award offer will be revoked.

In order to avoid cancellation of a Fulbright grant, KAEC requires that all Korean-American applicants provide written proof that they do not have Korean citizenship before they accept their grant award. This can be accomplished in only two ways, which are listed as follows:

1. Submit written proof from the ROK Ministry of Justice declaring that the Korean-American applicant does not have Korean citizenship.
2. Submit a formal document from the ROK Ministry of Justice declaring that the Korean-American applicant has successfully renounced their Korean citizenship.
