Award Activity

Host institutions welcome scholars to teach undergraduate or graduate level courses in the field of Teaching English as a Foreign Language (TEFL) or applied linguistics. Applicants should suggest courses for consideration in their proposal. The typical Algerian university class is generally two hours long, meets once per week, and is comprised of an average of 60-150 students per class. Applicants should expect to teach six to ten hours per week. Activities and courses will be finalized in consultation with the U.S. Embassy and host institution. Algeria can be a very rewarding teaching experience for motivated, flexible, and adventurous scholars. More information about teaching proposals available here ^[1].

Award Length

Six to Ten months

Award Dates

Grants typically begin in October. If possible, grantees are encouraged to arrive mid-September to participate in the in-country orientation, finalize lodging arrangements and settle-in, and prepare for the academic year.

Teaching grants must correspond with the length of the Algerian academic semester. The academic year in Algeria is from October to July, with administrators reporting in September, and includes three terms: October through December, January through March, and April through early-July. There are two two-week breaks in the winter and spring, and the calendar may be adjusted around Islamic holidays. Applicants applying for a 10-month grant will need to teach three full semesters.

- ENS School Algiers seeks candidates in education, applied linguistics, composition, Teaching English to Students of Other Languages (TESOL) and TEFL.

Special Features

During their grant period, Fulbright U.S. Scholars in the Middle East and North Africa region may apply for a short-term regional travel grant (maximum five to fourteen days) to participation in a variety of activities including faculty and student lectures, graduate or faculty seminars, curriculum development, public lectures, panel presentations, needs assessment, conferences, or some combination thereof. Funding requests for the Regional Travel Program should be directed to the Fulbright Program Office in the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, at the Department of State in Washington, D.C.

Degree Requirements

Ph.D. (or other terminal degree) not required

Additional Qualification Information

A terminal degree along with demonstrated professional experiences in the specific field of teaching is preferred. Higher education teaching experience is also preferred. Previous study, work, or travel experience in North Africa or the Middle East (MENA) and some familiarity with Arab and Islamic culture is preferred.

Additional Language Requirement

All courses related to the education, linguistics, and TEFL fields will be taught in English. A working knowledge of French or Arabic is preferred, as it will help grantees to function in the community and communicate with host institutions. The Maghrebi dialect 'Darija' (Algerian, Moroccan, or Tunisian) will be more helpful for daily life than Modern Standard Arabic.

Invitation Requirement

A letter of invitation is optional.
