Award Activity

Host institutions welcome scholars to teach courses, conduct research, carry out a combination of teaching and research activities, or conduct a professional project in any discipline.

For proposals that include a teaching component, full time local faculty are expected to teach up to 4 subjects per semester. However, host institutions are flexible with the number of subjects/hours for Fulbright Scholars.

For proposals that carry out a combination of teaching and research activities, there are no requirements for a teaching/research ratio as this depends on the interests of and agreement between the scholar and the host institution.

More information about teaching and/or research proposals availablehere [1].

The Professional Project activity type provides professionals and artists in various fields the opportunity to interact with relevant organizations to further their career goals. Professional Projects may include visits to organizations in the applicant's field, practical experience in day-to-day operations, public lectures, artist residencies, or other appropriate professional activities. For more information, FAQs available here [2].

Award Length
Six to Ten months
Award Dates

Host institutions prefer to host scholars based on the academic year (September - June). Any teaching component must correspond with the length of the academic semester in Bahrain. Applicants proposing to teach two full semesters must apply for a 10-month grant in order to match the length of the academic year.

Locations

Any appropriate institution. Potential host institutions include:

- University of Bahrain [3]
- Royal University for Women [4]
- Bahrain Polytechnic [5]
- Bahrain Institute for Banking and Finance [6]
- Arabian Gulf University [7]
- Ahlia University [8]
