Maintenance Allowance:

- Approximately $4,500 per month

Housing Allowance: If awardee housing is not provided by the host institution, a housing allowance will be provided. The housing allowance is $600-$900 per month, based on the number of accompanying dependents.

Dependent Allowance: An additional maintenance allowance of $200-$350 per month will be provided for awardees with accompanying dependents, based on the number of accompanying dependents.

All allowances are paid in Korean won and may be adjusted in case of extreme exchange rate fluctuations.

Estimated Travel and Relocation Allowance

Round-trip economy-class international airfare for the awardee will be arranged with the guidance of the Fulbright commission.

Additional airfare for one accompanying dependent will be provided to an awardee if their award is for 10 months or more.

A one-time payment of $250 will be provided as a settling-in allowance.

An excess baggage allowance will also be provided in the following amounts:

- $350 on a receipt basis for awards of 4 months
- $500 on a receipt basis for awards of 10 months

Estimated Book and Research Allowance

- One-time payment of $500 for awards of 4 months
- One-time payment of $700 for awards of 10 months

Dependent Tuition Allowance

Up to $5,000 per child per semester (max two semesters) will be provided for up to two accompanying dependents in grades K-12. In order to be eligible for tuition assistance, a school-aged child must be at least six years old at the time of the award start date.

The dependent tuition allowance will be provided on a reimbursement basis upon submission of actual receipts. Reimbursement is based on actual costs of tuition and fees only. The tuition allowance amount may be adjusted for shorter award periods.

The tuition allowance is designed to offset the costs of educational expenses, not to fully cover them. As such, awardees are encouraged to explore multiple educational options for dependents.

Award Activity

With the reunification of East and West Germany after the fall of the Berlin Wall, the Korean peninsula became one of the last places on earth in which it could be said that one nation, sharing a common language, culture, history, and people, remained split in two. This fact has prompted some individuals to refer to North and South Korea as the only divided country in the world, the legacy of a war which technically never ended as peace came through an armistice signed in 1953.

In this context, the Korean peninsula presents a unique environment for the study and discussion of peace as historical events are visibly interwoven with those of the present day. The Peace Studies Program at Kyung Hee University is open to individuals interested in contributing to this study and discussion by teaching graduate courses for one or two semesters (4 or 10 months, respectively) at Kyung Hee University's Graduate Institute of Peace Studies in Namyangju, Gyeonggi.

Peace Studies Scholars at Kyung Hee University are anticipated to complete three hours of in-class instruction per week, with an average course size of eight to 15 students. Courses should focus on the causes of armed conflict; how to develop ways to prevent and resolve war, genocide, terrorism and gross violations of human rights; or how to build peaceful and just systems and societies. Scholars are also expected to assist with curriculum development and to advise students.

Locations

The Graduate Institute of Peace Studies, Kyung Hee University, Gwangneung Campus, Namyangju, Gyeonggi

Established in 1984, the Graduate Institute of Peace Studies at Kyung Hee University represents its long history in the pursuit of peace under its founder and first president, Dr. Young Seek Choue^[1]. Tracing its roots to 1949, Kyung Hee University originated as a two-year college in Busan. Plagued by debt early on in its history, under Dr. Choue's leadership, the university transformed itself, moving forward even in the midst of the war to become a four-year college in 1952. In 1954, after the conclusion of the Korean War, Kyung Hee's campus was relocated to Seoul. Today, the university has three campuses, including the main campus in Seoul, a global campus in Suwon, and the Graduate Institute of Peace Studies campus in Namyangju (known as the Gwangneung Campus).

Founded, as it was, amidst the turmoil and aftermath created by years of colonization and war, Kyung Hee University has taken an active interest in development and reform throughout its history, establishing the Institute for Underdeveloped Society Studies in the 1960s, the Goodwill, Cooperation, and Service (GCS) Research Institute and the International Peace Research Institute in the 1970s, and finally the Graduate Institute of Peace Studies in the 1980s. In recognition of the university's efforts towards the cause of peace, it was awarded a UNESCO Prize for Peace Education in 1993, making it the first educational institute to receive this award. Dr. Choue was also personally recognized for his efforts towards the cause of peace as the recipient of a UN Special Award of Meritorious Service for Peace in 1996.

Special FeaturesFulbright East Asia Pacific Regional Travel Program

Fulbright Scholars in the East Asia and Pacific (EAP) region have the opportunity to apply for funds to support short-term (3-14 days) travel to other countries in the EAP region for activities such as lectures, workshops, graduate or faculty seminars, master classes or recitals, curricular advising or panel presentations. EAP Regional Travel Program funding covers transportation only. Regional Travel Program activities/host sites should not be included in the initial Fulbright application. Scholars may pursue invitations for short-term activities in other EAP countries once notified that they have been selected for a Fulbright grant, and may only apply for travel program funds once they have actively started their Fulbright grant in their host country. Scholars on Flex grants are not eligible for the regional travel grant.

Additional Comments

Visa Requirements

All Fulbright U.S. Scholar awardees to Korea MUST obtain an A-3 visa and enter the country on a U.S. passport.

U.S. Applicant Advisory

Note: The Korean Government utilizes the words "national/nationality" as opposed to "citizen/citizenship" in most official documentation in English. These words can be viewed as interchangeable for the purposes of this advisory.

Candidates who are nationals of Korea will NOT be permitted to undertake Fulbright awards to Korea.

Individuals of Korean heritage may have dual U.S.-ROK nationality unbeknownst to them or their family.

In April 2010, the Republic of Korea passed legislation that allows dual nationality, with differing rules for men and women. If one of an applicant's parents is or was a Korean national, the applicant may automatically inherit Korean nationality via Korea's "jus sanguinis" laws. In order to confirm their Korean nationality status, applicants of Korean heritage MUST contact the nearest Korean Embassy or Korean Consulate ^[4] PRIOR TO submitting a Fulbright application.

Applicants in the following circumstances are considered by the Republic of Korea to be Korean nationals:

- An individual whose father or mother was still a Korean national at the time of the individual's birth.
- An individual whose father was a Korean national and was deceased at the time of the individual's birth.

Applicants who fall under either of the categories listed above must contact the nearest Korean Embassy or Korean Consulate immediately to learn more about these regulations and the suggested procedures for filing for renunciation/loss of Korean nationality.

Applicants who were born in Korea and received American citizenship through naturalization should have lost their Korean nationality automatically at the time of their naturalization. However, official renunciation documentation () must still be submitted to the Korean Government in order to formalize a citizenship status change. Per the Korean Consulate in Houston ^[5], "Failure to formally renounce one's citizenship after being naturalized in another country may cause issues when applying for visas, marriage or birth registry, and legal matters." As such, those from Korea naturalized as American citizens must contact the nearest Korean Embassy or Consulate to ensure that their loss of Korean nationality has been formally recognized.

Applicants who were born in Korea and received American citizenship through adoption should have lost their Korean nationality automatically six months after American citizenship was granted. However, it has come to Fulbright Korea's attention that Korean nationality renunciation has not always been finalized for adoptees. As such, those adopted from Korea also must contact the nearest Korean Embassy or Consulate prior to submitting a Fulbright application to confirm their Korean nationality status.

It is the sole responsibility of the applicant to determine whether they have dual nationality and how it impacts their eligibility for a Fulbright award. If any individual is found to have dual nationality with Korea at the time of or after award acceptance, their award offer will be revoked.

In order to avoid cancellation of a Fulbright award, Fulbright Korea requires that all American applicants of Korean heritage provide written proof that they do not have Korean nationality before they accept their Fulbright award. This can be accomplished in two ways, which are listed as follows:

1. Submit written proof from the ROK Ministry of Justice declaring that the applicant does not have Korean nationality.
 - Such written proof may take the form of the "basic certificate" (), "family relations/register certificate" (), etc. Documentation must clearly indicate that the applicant does not have Korean nationality in order for it to be accepted as written proof.
2. Submit a formal document from the ROK Ministry of Justice declaring that the applicant has successfully renounced/lost their Korean nationality.
 - Such documentation may take the form of a "loss of nationality notice" (), "renunciation of nationality notice" (), etc.

As an individual's Korean nationality status is contingent upon specific personal and family history, all applicants of Korean heritage should contact the nearest Korean Embassy or Consulate as early as possible once they have established their interest in the Fulbright Program in Korea in order to confirm their Korean nationality status and acquire appropriate documentation.
